Word from the Executive Chairman

Dear brothers & sisters in Christ,

A blessed evening to everyone! As we celebrate the 27th Anniversary of GLOBAL REACHOUT, let me present my three themes for tonight: These are:

- Heavenly praises,
- Concentric Outlook
- Kingdom Connect

First, Heavenly praises: God has helped us see the light of dawn amidst the challenges that GLOBAL REACHOUT faced this year.

On the 7th of June this year, our Weixin Public Account was closed down for good. Instead of actively thinking about solutions when we received the news, we waited quietly and sought God's face. On the third day, an elder messaged me on a vision that he had while praying over this matter – "The Contemporary Esther". These words kept swirling around in my mind as if to tell us that GR is to take up the role of "The Contemporary Esther". Subsequently, it was unanimously decided to remodel our two series on the family and the marketplace, with a view to letting the Truth shine through our daily lives. Separately on the 5th of August and the 1st of October, we launched four platforms on Weixin and Weibo. God has led us to broaden coverage through this turn of events. Praise the Lord!

Next, our financial situation ran into a rough patch this year. Right on time, God provided us with an opportunity to share our ministry, pray for our needs and collect love offerings for us. And, the channel of blessing is Sion Church Bedok. As such, a one-off collection made up for our shortfall accumulated over the past six months. Praise the Lord!

Last, we went ahead to launch our initiative for the production of e-books in the midst of grave challenges from the external environment. We are pleased to announce that these books are now available for sale over the internet. Next year, we will be launching the e-book App for convenient access by our brothers and sisters. Praise the Lord!

Next, we move on to the second theme: Concentric Outlook

The influence of Satan is settling into the various stratum of society; value outlooks, speech and behaviour that run counter to the Truth are all over the place.

More than four thousand Christian leaders representing 198 countries attended the Third Lausanne Congress on World Evangelization held in Cape Town, South Africa 2010 to explore the important topic: Even as Gospel ministry continues to grow, the situation around the world is not improving in tandem with such an expansion.

The Cape Town Commitment adopted declared that "We need intensive efforts to train all God's people in whole-life discipleship, which means to live, to think, to work and to speak from a biblical worldview and with mission effectiveness in every place or circumstance of daily life and work."

In other words, Kingdom impact follows disciples wherever they set foot.

- The disciple does not merely spread the gospel, he is Christ-centred.
- He practices justice and equitability within his environment.
- He shows his love for his neighbours through his work.
- He shows care for God's creation at his workplace, including mankind and the value system and order found in the environment.
- He sets Kingdom culture into place at his place of work.
- He crafts the workplace into a living embodiment expounding the Good News in its holistic wonder.
- He makes disciples as per the Great Commission at the workplace.

Characteristics of Whole-Life Disciples:
• Think and understand the Truth holistically, not partially
• Response to trials and let the Truth shine through him in faith
• True to the Call and pursue excellence in workplace
• Passion in upholding Truth with no tolerance towards Evil
• Rather be an elite soldier than a sheep at the workplace
• Grow the Kingdom influence and expand the Kingdom culture at the workplace
• Spread the Good News

We need to have more Kingdom Partnership in order to bring up these Whole-Life Disciples effectively and efficiently, which is my last theme.

Different organizations, churches and disciples have responded to different calls and missions. The strength of organizations lies in their expertise in particular fields. The challenge is they operate independently of one another, and easily run out of funds and manpower.

The churches are the base camps that carry out the equipping and shepherding of believers. Their forte is by way of regular contributions and volunteer workers. However, as churches, they face challenges too. The people they serves are basically from marketplace; however, practical materials are lacking for integrated disciple training for the real world where action takes place. As a result, the career disciples play the main role of "nice guys", keeping silent when they come face-to-face against evil forces. Additionally, dichotomy thinking dividing businesses into holy and worldly regimes put a leash on marketplace influence as well. Similar results appear in the passion to spread the Gospel. The sad upshot is that problems end up sorted out via worldly means.

What went wrong?

Spreading the Gospel is definitely a must, because "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world..." (Matt. 24:14) However, if we purpose our entry into the workplace to solely do that, we would not be able to focus on our official duties. There is even a danger of us adopting a "just-muddle-through" approach to our work. There is no doubt that such attitudes do not provide for "good witness", much less honouring God, or bringing in the Kingdom impact. Besides, what meaning could work itself and the years of education and equipping bring to us with this mindset or attitude?

Tim Keller said, "Some conservative Christians think of the story of salvation as the fall, redemption and heaven. In this narrative, the purpose of redemption is an escape from this world… If, however, the story of salvation is creation, fall, redemption, restoration, then things look different… the purpose of redemption is not to escape the world but to renew it…It is the coming of God's kingdom to renew all things."

Thus, the mission of believers is to become disciples, work towards influence and renewal, as God's plan is to renew of everything on earth (Rev. 21:5). The great commission given to us from Christ is one of the renewal of the mind, transformation of lives, and the work of influencing our fellow men (Matt. 28:19; Rom. 12:2). God has, through renewal of His disciples, transform the Babylonian system on earth into that of the Kingdom of God. God has tailored-made roadmaps for each and every one of us, and put us into vastly different fields of work for us to raise the power of Christ, save and renew all that have been destroyed by Satan and draw everyone back to His fold.

I believe that only the disciples who put on Jesus Christ are able to become the light and salt of the earth and make a difference. Lord Jesus Christ is the Greatest Prophet and Priest. He is also the King of Kings. When we disciples put Jesus Christ in the centre of our world, we are able to integrate these three elements and achieve the power to attain the influence needed.

With prophetic truth anointing, we would be able to think about and understand the Truth in a holistic manner. With priesthood anointing, we establish deeper relations with God, allow others see Christ in us and foster good interpersonal relationship. Finally, with compassionate and royal kingship anointing, we are able to treat people and handle matters with kindness, love, equality and justice, as well as to manage time, money and other resources from God with His perfect wisdom.

We would find ourselves plagued with rising problems and diminishing Kingdom influence if we are not able to integrate all three-fold anointings described above. At the prophethood front, we would find our interpretation of Biblical truths to be short on holism, focussing on just the character and witnessing of Christ, and even believing that there is a divide between the sacred and secular – dichotomy mindset. We would misinterpret that workplace is worldly, and only church is holy – and thus not the stage to bear witness. At the kingship front, we would just focus on work and result even at the cost of human needs. And at the priesthood front, we would be repeatedly mouthing mantras like, "I love you, oh, How I love you!" but play mute when we found ourselves standing face to face with something evil, working half-heartedly and lacking in executive effectiveness.

Contrast the above with a disciple anointed at all three areas. The anointment at the priesthood front earns him the respect and love from people around him. The anointment at the royalty and kingship fronts confers him the ability to manage equitably, work wisely, strategically and exude executive competence. Anointment at the prophetic front will empower him to organize his thoughts holistically, tapping on wisdom and insight while handling crucial issues, and hold fast to biblical principles in the face of evil without fear.

How can one grow a total-life disciple?

This calls for more kingdom partnership! Given that the resources of our Kingdom of Heaven are found within organizations, churches and disciples, we can synergize and consolidate these resources and train future total-life disciples by working alongside them. The influence of the Kingdom of Heaven would then show up in every domain within our society, as influential elite soldiers are adequately equipped within the marketplace.

At this juncture, allow me to extend a special invitation to everyone to become a partner to GLOBAL REACHOUT! To this end, I would like to propose that:

• "Marketplace Theology" is to be included into the curriculum in our theological colleges to equip future pastors;
• Churches make use of teaching materials from our e-books, such as "Glorious Workplace" and "Happy Family" categories in cell groups and fellowships.
• Disciples make use of our e-book "Happy Family" category in family worships.
• Churches carry out marketplace discipleship training in small groups, equipping marketplace disciples and elite soldiers.
• Christian entrepreneurs make use of our e-book "Marketplace Gas Station" category to transform workplace culture through "Corporate Culture Family" to be setup.
