Following Jesus

Matt 4: 18-22

The disciples were given a new identity — "fishers of men." Yet an identity and mission without action is nothing more than castles in the air. The disciples of that time wasted no time soaking in the joy of being called; they responded immediately and took action. Today, we will explore what "action" meant in Matthew 4:20 and 4:22, and reflect on how we, too, can live out the calling to be "fishers of men" in light of the world today.

Matthew 4 states, "20 At once they left their nets and followed him... 22 Immediately they left the boat and their fathers and followed Jesus." Living in today's world, we are no longer fishermen in the literal sense. Yet the mission of "fishing for men" still rests upon us. How, then,can we put this mission into practice? Become a true disciple.

This is the foundation of fulfilling the mission. In your daily environment, live out the example of Christ. Your character, your words, and the way you treat others form the essence of "fishing for men." When you embody Christ's love and truth, others are naturally drawn to you. The influence of a Christlike life is, in itself, a silent gospel.

Cast the "net" of the gospel proactively. " Fishing for men" is not about waiting passively—it is an active, intent-driven pursuit.

1. Pray persistently. Keep praying for those around you—family members, friends, and colleagues—who have not yet come to faith. Ask the Holy Spirit to move their hearts and create opportunities for them to encounter the gospel.

2. Build relationships. Genuinely care for others and establish trusting relationships. People often come to believe in the message only after they trust the messenger.

3. Share your testimony. At the right time, share how Jesus has worked in your life. A personal testimony is one of the most powerful forms of evangelism.

4. Be courageous in reaping. Take courage to invite others to church events, Bible study groups, or to read gospel booklets together. Seize every opportunity to share the good news and lead them toward the truth.

5. Equip yourself. Just as fishermen need to learn the skills of catching fish, we too must learn effective ways of communication as "fishers of men." The Holy Spirit will guide you in sharing the gospel effectively and in answering their questions. Participate in evangelism or discipleship training courses to strengthen your skills in reaching out to others.

6. Rely on the Holy Spirit. The power for all this work comes from the Holy Spirit. Each day, ask the Spirit to fill you—to grant you courage, wisdom and love, and to guide you when, where, and to whom you should share the gospel. Without the Spirit's guidance and empowerment, all our efforts would be in vain.

Jesus' call to the fishermen is also His call to each one of us. He is not asking us to become "better" fishermen, but to become fishers of men. May we all respond to the Lord's call without hesitation—laying down the "nets" and "boats" that hinder us in life—and follow Jesus closely, becoming His faithful disciples who bring more souls into God's kingdom and glorify His name. Amen.

Face to Face with Emotions Online Course

This course taught me how to manage my emotions correctly and interact with people experiencing negative emotions. I also came to realize that emotions themselves are neither good nor bad. When faced with negative emotions, no one should suppress them; instead, they should express, release, and soothe them healthily and constructively.

Wisdom Tips for Singles Online Course

Love is not about whom you meet; it is about being willing to be transformed by God! From this course, I picked up two important points:

1. In God's perspective, no one is flawless. Welcome love with an open heart and modify your expectations, aiming to understand one another.
2. You can begin by transforming yourself to become a mature partner: understand your inner emotional needs and discernments coming from God, in addition to emotional control and facilitate effective communication.

(Sister Wang, Singapore, 05/11/2025)

A person's maturity is not defined by age, as outward maturity and inner emotional growth are often not developed at the same pace.
